IMPERIAL SERVICE ORDER (ISO)

The Order and Medal were instituted by King Edward VII on 08 August 1902 to reward meritorious services on the part of members of the administrative or clerical branches of the Civil Service throughout the British Empire. At least 25 years of meritorious service is usually required. There is only one class of the Order and knighthood is not conferred by the Order. A person who receives the Order may use the post-nominal letters ISO.

The BADGE for men is a seven pointed star of silver, surmounted by a crown and in the centre is a circular plaque of gold having in its centre the Royal cypher, and round its circumference the words 'FOR FAITHFUL SERVICE', both in dark blue lettering. Women have the gold plaque on a silver laurel wreath rather than on the star. The Order has been awarded 97 times to Canadians.

The IMPERIAL SERVICE MEDAL is awarded for services not warranting the ISO and granted for similar reasons. The Medal was originally the same as the badge of the Order except that the centre plaque was in silver. It was changed to a silver medal with the current effigy of the Sovereign on the obverse and the legend 'FOR FAITHFUL SERVICE' on the reverse below a figure of a male in a sitting position (at his cottage door). The name is engraved on the edge. The medal has been awarded 7,121 times to Canadians.

Both the Order and the Medal have rings for suspension and are worn by men on the left breast along with other medals and by women on the left shoulder from a bow. The ribbon is equal stripes of red/blue/red watered, 38-mm wide. Canadians have not received this Order or the Medal since 1946.
